POSSE BATTLES WITH TWO COLORADO CATTLE RUSTLERS
Walsenburg, Colo., Aug. 1.—After a chase of 15 miles through dangerous mountain passes in northern New Mexico and southern Colorado, Samuel Pecheres and Lino Pecheres, brothers, youthful members of a desperate gang of cattle rustlers and horse thieves which has been terrorizing settlers in the state for the last ten years, were captured by a posse headed by deputy sheriffs D. S. Arthur and George Bruce, of Huernano county.

The men had been without food for 36 hours and were so weakened by lack of food and sleep that they made no resistance when surrounded. The chase began Sunday night, when they with other members of the gang, stole 40 horses from the Rio ranch near Emery Gap, N. M., after shooting the cowboy who was in charge of the horses.

Posses were quickly formed and the pursuit grew so hot that the brothers who separated from other members of the gang were compelled to travel night and day without sleep and with no food.
